You love your daughter. You certainly want to protect your daughter from heartbreak. You also want to protect your daughter from that abusive boyfriend. Nearly 20% of both boys and girls reported themselves as victims of physical and sexual abuse in dating relationships. When the survey asked about psychological abuse--broadly defined as actions ranging from name-calling to excessive tracking of a victim--more than 60% of each gender reported being victims and perpetrators of such behavior. Your daughter could be one of these statistics.

Shuffle these all together. Randomly flash a card to your daughter and ask her to answer "yes" or "no" for each behavior. As silly as it seems, this will cling in your daughter's memory--especially when she needs to remember it the most.

Yes, you will get lots of eye rolls but that price will be worth it.
